WHARLING, W. VA., MAY 1, 1988 The Coun ry Is in Larnest. The interest taken in the appointment of the Chief Examiner of the Civil Service Commission denotes a lively appreciation of the importance of the work for which the Commission was created. If the commission had offered a reward for the worst man for the place Keim would have stood a good chance of leading all the rest. If there were any doubt of his conspicuous unfitness for so delicate a task, education, good oramon sense and a delicate appreciation of the work, the tone of the Harrisburg Telegraph, with which he recently became connected, would clinch the business connected, would clinch the business. Here is a gem, presumably from Keim's own pen: "The action of the Civil Service Commission in the selection of a Chief Examiner creates a hubbub among the visionary theorists who believe that knowledge of the workings of a system renders a man incapable of service in an effort to correct the evils under that system. These fellows ought to instruct the publishers of their journals to hire a farmer, a bricklayer or a tailor to run their printing machine."

They are not our bonds but the bonds of the work of the conditions and the same station of the conditions and the same station of the condition of the cond "Visonary theorists" are those persons who believe that the civil zervice ought to be reformed, who know that a Commission has been created to do what it can in that direction, and who desire the effort to be made without unnecessary embarrassment. tendencies, has this to say of the situation:

The iron industry must soon adjust itself to the changed condition of affairs in that branch of trade, and a proper equilibrium between production and coasumption be established, as well as a more nearly even scale of wages for the different sections of the country be devised. Then a milder temperature can hardly be much longer delayed, and with more propitious growing weather a decided improvement in the state of the crops will take place. Indeed, already there are very encouraging signs in the sections least affected by the past week's cold weather. The reports of very heavy damage to the The reports of very heavy damage to the wheat plant on account of winter kuling, so wheat plant on account of winter killing, so prevalent a month ago, have been considerably modified, and in many districts very pronounced progress for the better has been made since the first of April, though of course the plants still backward, and has, therefore, as said at the outset, been but life if any affected by the cold temperature of the past week. At the same time this cold weather has not interfered with spring planting, and everywhere in the farming districts the work has been actively prosecuted during the last ten days.

Ing the last ten days.

The outlook for the crops, therefore, is not unpromising at the moment, and as railroad earnings, though not as heavy as they have been, still continue large and above the corresponding period last year, and as money is easy and flowing teward this centre, and as there is a fair export movement in progress accompanied by a smaller import movement, with foreign exchange tending toward lover figures by reason of railroad loans negotated abroad, as there are all these favorable influences, a most hopeful feeling prevails, though it is not to be denied that operations are conducted with extreme caution; and that there is a very generous disposition to await the outcome of the crops before engaging upon ventures of a large or difficult character. And this disposition is well refiscated in the transactions at the Stock Exchange, where prices fluctuate within very narrow limits, and pseculation is halting, timid, uncertain, and business insufferably dull. As to the probable yield of wheat, it is manifestly too early as yet to form any kind of judgment. Railroad earnings have is terly been somewhat less favorable, not that there is any decided or general failing off from the figures of a year ago, but simply that the increase is no longer so large as it was. The explanation offered is that farmers have been so active with their spring work that they have not been able to give much time to sending produce to market, and that as consequence the railroads have had a smaller volume of this kind of traffic. Especially is this stated to be true of the roads in the Suthwest, which in one or two cases show a decrease.
